Catalog Description: Exploration of some of the history of the popular and historic holidays that are celebrated in the United States.

Extended Description: What is a holiday? Why is one holiday more important than another? This class examines the history of many American holidays. We will dive into the origins of where these holidays come from. We will explore how these holidays expanded to what they are today. Some holidays have variations in them. For example, Columbus Day and Indigenous People’s Day. Then there are holidays celebrated around the same time of year but have no direct connection to each other. Students will be able to differentiate between the two. In this class, traditions will be explored, both traditions from society and from classmates.

Learning Outcomes:
During this semester students will learn, listen, write, discuss
1. Reflect on holiday traditions at home
2. Understand the different holidays
3. Be able to explain how some relate to one another
4. Understand the tension and cultural significance of the holidays

Schedule: (subject to change)
Feb 1- end of add/drop; March 30 – last day for course withdrawal; Apr 29- last day for students to elected Satisfactory/Unsatisfactory option for full semester courses

People have been fighting to change Columbus Day to Indigenous People’s Day. Also, many people in the United States celebrate Juneteenth as well as Independence Day. You will choose from these two pairs of holidays, Columbus Day/Indigenous People’s Day or Independence Day/Juneteenth. From there your job is to write a persuasive letter to the President of the College convincing him how we should celebrate the pair of holidays you chose.

Clarify which pair of holidays you are choosing from. You can only choose one pair. Your opinion should emerge very clearly from your letter.

Final Assessment- Traditions and You

For your final assessment, you will pick 10 out of the 19 that we studied this semester and explain the traditions you will celebrate with each of the holidays you’ve chosen. You have to explain what traditions you would incorporate into your life. If you wouldn’t change any of your traditions in the holidays you learned about, explain then what the old traditions you have now. To present your traditions, you may present your information in a variety of ways. You may choose to write an essay about it. Or you can create a presentation. Or you may create a Prezi.
Other formats are acceptable, please discuss with me. This assignment doesn’t require any outside research.

State each holiday and when it is celebrated. State how people celebrate it. What do they do to celebrate it? What foods do they eat? Explain why that holiday is important to you.

Due:
Tuesday, May 11 at noon

STATEMENT ON ANTI-OPPRESSIVE EDUCATOR PREPARATION

In June 2020, SUNY New Paltz made a commitment to becoming an antiracist campus. We now find ourselves in a defining moment that is arguably different from that which has come before. We have an opportunity to make explicit the connections between schooling and capitalism, racism, hetero/sexism, ableism, and queerphobia. We have an opportunity to build a different world: a world that puts people before profit and that educates in order to liberate.

The daily work of educator preparation can be either racist or antiracist. As Ibram X. Kendi teaches us, there is no such thing as ‘not racist.’ There is no neutral position in a society that not only operates but also depends on antiblackness and other forms of oppression. Educator preparation can either remain complicit in amplifying colonial narratives, reproducing systems of policing, and perpetuating educational segregation and white supremacy -- or we can work to disrupt the historic practice of normalizing anti-black racism in the classroom and beyond.

We make these commitments to you (our students) and to each other:

§ conduct an equity audit on our syllabi in order to investigate how and where antiblackness and other oppressions show up and can be disrupted
§ examine our pedagogical approaches and promote anti-oppressive practices
§ seek out and engage in professional learning opportunities in abolitionist, anti-racist, and anti-oppressive education
§ create opportunities to listen to students, alumni, members of the academic community, and New Paltz community about oppression in systems of education
§ promote and participate in School of Education community fora at the intersection of educator preparation and racism
§ make explicit that today’s anti-oppressive struggles build on centuries of resistance to oppression
§ urge the school of education to recruit, hire, and retain Black, Indigenous, and People of Color faculty and students.

Educators hold tremendous power in helping to shape what comes next, and we acknowledge that these commitments are among our actions toward building equitable relationships and connections in the classroom and the world.
